AIMS AND CONTENT
20. What issues does the resource aim to address?	“The purpose of this resource guide is to provide museums with a foundation from which to develop their own practices and policies around repatriation of kōiwi tangata [Māori: human remains]. From case studies to research best practice, this guide provides key information on the process and practice of repatriation in Aotearoa.” [homepage] The resource notes that “repatriation is about restoring dignity and making right the wrongs of the past. It is also about museums (and other institutions) apologising for their involvement in the removal, collection, and detainment of ancestors without consent. It is also aimed at restoring dignity and making right the wrongs of the past caused by unsolicited study of ancestral remains without the permission of or consultation with source communities.” [Why is repatriation important?]
