12. If this is part of an initiative, what is the initiative?	“Human Rights Careers (HRC) was founded in 2015 with the goal to support human rights students, alumni, graduates and professionals in pursuing and developing their career in the highly competitive field of human rights. Our mission is to make human rights careers more accessible by providing information about online courses, entry level jobs, paid internships, masters degrees, scholarships and other career related information. With our website we guide our readers from the moment they are interested in working in the human rights sector to their senior-level position at an International Organization.”

AIMS AND CONTENT
20. What issues does the resource aim to address?	“When you think of a museum, places like the Smithsonian, Tate Modern, Louvre, The Egyptian Museum or the National Gallery of Victoria leap to mind. Museums are educational spaces that use artifacts and exhibits to bring the past to life. In somewhat recent years, however, a new form of museum has emerged: the human rights museum. These spaces have two purposes: to educate and to warn. Using photographs, objects, and interactive displays, human rights museums examine past violations and remember those affected. Visitors leave with more knowledge and understanding, but the primary hope is that these museums provoke empathy. Empathy is a key part in preventing future injustices. Human rights museums are also frequently controversial. Which human rights violations are memorialized, how much space certain events are given, and if certain exhibits are exploitative are common concerns.”
